With a fleet of more than 600 trucks and plant to oversee – around a third of which is FUSO – Fulton Hogan Wellington workshop manager Paul McGuire knows you can't beat genuine parts and expert support to keep things running smoothly.

“OEM parts are better quality without a doubt,” says Paul. “The price has got to be competitive, but the warranty adds at least 10-20% value.”

All FUSO Genuine Parts carry a minimum 12-month warranty, which extends to 24 months if the part is fitted by an authorised FUSO dealer. While Paul and his crew of 12 do the lion's share of maintenance in-house at their Seaview workshop, they depend on assistance when required from Diesel and Equipment Services Ltd just down the road.

“It's handy having an authorised FUSO service dealership right on your doorstep,” says Paul.

Outside of servicing trucks under warranty, DESL provides overflow support and runs a back-up 24/7 emergency call-out service.

“A lot of our paving crews work at night, when traffic volume is low; we have a mechanic on call to deal with any issues in the fleet, but DESL is always available as back-up should we need it,” says Paul.

The FUSO mix consists of Canter, Fighter, HD and Shogun trucks, some of which have racked up more than 500,000km over 12+ years of service. Paul says a combination of careful servicing and overall reliability is the reason for their longevity.

“We look after our fleet – to give them a long life and to ensure they stay on the road more than they do in the workshop,” says Paul.
